

Howdy All,

Why we should fight small battles.

State

One of the last, spiteful things done by the senators who lost their seats last year, Coghill and Giessel, was to make a mask mandate for the Senate, even though the science is clear that masks not only don't help, but wearing them long-term can bring severe consequences. They are bacterial cesspools, and Fauci himself did a paper in 2008 that talks about the Spanish Flu and how most deaths weren't because of the virus itself but resulted directly from severe secondary pneumonia caused by well-known bacterial "pneumopathogens" that colonized the upper respiratory tract (you know, the area you're masking). In the Senate, Senator Lora Reinbold has been wearing a face shield instead of a cheap non-N95 mask like everyone else. There have been some complaints from staffers who are addicted to mainstream media and the fear porn they put out on the virus, so now the Senate, instead of making sure the facts are known, decided that she is no longer able to participate in person. They had a vote that the ungodly, unconstitutional, ADA-violating rules they had created would be enforced and her medical rights stripped from her. I hope everyone realizes that being forced to wear a mask is technically a "medical intervention." The vote was 18-1 with only Senator Mike Shower voting against it. Yes, all our Fairbanks' Senators voted to take her rights away. What's infinitely sad about this is that some of the conservatives gave the excuse that they were just following the law. So how does that work with a law that itself violates the Constitution, spits in God's face by telling you to cover the Image Dei, and violates federal ADA and HIPAA laws/regs? So they're saying you have to obey all unlawful laws? In the end, they stood for government that has a boot on your neck, muzzling you, and sticking a needle in your arm with experimental drugs.
