

administration to change the way we manage all our nation's public lands for climate, starting with America's Arctic.”

[\[Days before an expected decision on Willow, opposition to the Alaska oil project surges on TikTok\]](#)

Alaska's congressional delegation said during a call with reporters Monday morning that the decision was a landmark moment and a critical step that will boost state revenue by billions of dollars, create more than 2,000 jobs and help the state's long-struggling economy recover. The project is the largest oil project in Alaska in more than two decades, and is expected to significantly boost the long-flagging oil production that provides much of the state's income.